Another Halloween with its frightful jack-o'-lanterns and mischievous forms, its broomstick witches and airy faces, its devil-work and small boys' mischief, its merry parties and pumpkin pies has passed over the city and left its traces in many places. Outhouses overturned, gates mysteriously missing, debris piled against the front doors, porch chairs hanging from the trees, small boys sick-and girls too—young belles peaked from dancing, old folks tired, house littered and household angry—all this is the aftermath of Halloween.

There were many Halloween parties in the city last night. Hay racks packed with young people rumbled through the streets to the tune of merry singing and uncanny shouting until late into the night. White wrapped forms, with false faces, that an X-ray could scarcely penetrate, going to and from the masquerades were frequent sights on the cars and the streets. Pumpkin-headed youths and small girls behind paint smeared false faces were seen early in the evening running about scaring old mummies or peering into windows and startling family circles.

Within doors, behind locked windows and barricaded doorways, where the long, bony arms of mysterious prowlers could not stretch, were spread an appetizing array of pumpkin pies and other treats. The ring of laughter was heard in almost every garage, brought about no doubt by some gamin ducking his head in a tub of water or a stately old dame nibbling at an apple hung by a string. Scenes of merriment were plentiful and evidence of the mischief along the residential streets at the proper hour.

But there was also a less picturesque side of Halloween. The police were kept alert suppressing and chasing the older boys who were taking advantage of the means of Halloween and doing injury to personal property. Despite the efforts of the "blue-coats" considerable damage was done to the property of a movable nature in the outskirts of the city where the guardians of the law are not so numerous.

Police Commissioner Green was on the scene and police reserves were called out, together with ambulances from many hospitals. The police and firemen rescued many of those women and children who had been overcome in the desperate rush to the street.

GOOD VAUDEVILLE SHOW

MEMBERS OF THE COLUMBIA CLUB ARE ENTERTAINED.

Professional Artists from the Grand and the Unique on the Bill—Performance Enjoyed.

Halloween was celebrated at the Columbia Club last night with the first smoker and vaudeville entertainment of the season. Despite untoward circumstances, the evening in Madison-square Garden, to-night, tended to detract from the interest that would otherwise have been taken in the affair, the attendance was gratifying and an unusually attractive programme was received with marked appreciation. The performers, all of whom were professionals, were secured from the companies holding forth at the Unique, Grand and Empire during the week.

Cook and Howard, from the Unique, opened the bill with a musical stunt entitled "A Clown's Frolic in a Chinese Laundry." Cook's impersonation of a Chinaman is decidedly clever and Howard, as the clown, supplied much of the fun. The two proved themselves artists on various musical instruments. Dorothy Neville, from the Grand, followed with a monologue turn in which she did a little of everything from singing a drinking song to telling jokes, including an entertaining imitation of Ellen. She was well received. Santoro and Marlow, from the Unique, gave an acrobatic turn and comedy sketch that was well received.

Miss Shaw, a vocalist from the Unique, has a pleasing voice and her number was well received, even though her selections were rather familiar.

Julian Ross, as a Hebrew impersonator, has few peers and none who excels him in vaudeville work. His number was one of the features at the Grand during the past week, and it was equally well received by the members of the club last night. He is really funny, and so are his songs and stories, and he was roundly applauded. The programme was concluded with a singing and dancing specialty by Miss Grace Morrison, from the Unique, who is a diminutive, but none the less, an artist.

The entertainment was one of the best that has been given at the club and the enthusiasm with which it was received augurs well for the affairs of similar character that are scheduled for the winter by the entertainment committee, of which Dr. H. C. Kahlo is chairman.

Stole from a White Man.

Georgia Pash, 75 West Thirtieth street, colored, was arrested last night by Detective Colbert and Hauser and slated at the police station on a charge of grand larceny. She stole $20 from the purse of a white man with whom she was keeping company, according to the story told by the detectives.

Change in Style of Humor.

Washington Post. "If I had somebody would give me a few of his ideas on the subject are old-fashioned and out of date, and I really should like to know what things one may properly consider modern. I have never had been to the theater in ten years. I cannot to the theater last night, but I recall distinctly fifteen years ago I saw a man leave a matinee because the hero in the play made use of a curse word beginning with a 'd' and ending with a 'd' and was a 'd' ten days ago, the heroine was tied to a tree, and when the hero began a swearing remark she finished it for him with a 'd' and 'd'. Everybody laughed. By that I know that when a woman swears, it is funny, and if my forefathers knew it, half the women in their graves this very minute. In that same way, a poor blind girl hearing the hero's voice, mistakes him for her absent lover. When the girl's mother and the physician beg the hero to pretend to be the lover, assuring him that he can save the girl's life by so doing—well, it was such an affectionate situation that I was beginning to reach for my mouchoir, but to my surprise the hero made a funny grimace, and everybody laughed and everybody took a 'd'. That was my lesson number two in modern humor. Last week I went to see an extravaganza mounted on a nursery law here in the last act, an old man dropped dead, and if you'll believe me, that was the funny climax of the piece, and everybody merry. Suddenly I find, is thoughtfully 'murder, suppose, is thoughtfully laughable, and only the play is a 'd'. I dare say I shall learn in time just what things are funny to the modern mind, but at present it is extremely confusing."

Prevents Flaps from Foul.

Philadelphia Record. George M. Griffith, of No. 43 Ninth street, southwest, Washington, has invented a device designed to prevent the fouling of flags when raised on the staff and flung to the breeze. It is a small ball, arranged on a pivot on the top of the staff, with balyard attachments so arranged that the flag is kept free from the staff, regardless of the force, direction or character of the wind. With the approval of Captain Baird, superintendent of the State, War and Navy

MANY PERSONS BURNED

"HOUSE OF ALL NATIONS" AT NEW YORK DESTROYED.

Twelve Bodies Taken Out of the Ruins and Six Others Supposed to Be Under the Debris.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1, 1:45 a. m.—Fire early this (Sunday) morning destroyed the five-story brick tenement building at No. 45 Eleventh avenue. Nearly a score of persons perished.

The house is known as "The House of All Nations," because of the number of nationalities its tenants represent.

The police believe the fire to have been of incendiary origin.

At 3 o'clock twelve bodies had been recovered and the fire chief estimated that at least eighteen persons were killed. Most of them died from suffocation. Among the number were several children and women.

On the fifth floor eight bodies were recovered, the stairway leading to this floor having been burned away. In the dense darkness a terrible panic prevailed among the tenants of the house, many of whom had evidently fallen over the furniture in their apartments and met their death by suffocation.

Police Commissioner Green was on the scene and police reserves were called out, together with ambulances from many hospitals. The police and firemen rescued many of those women and children who had been overcome in the desperate rush to the street.

A great many went away last night and yesterday morning left for Zion City today.

Dowie did not appear at the evening meeting in Madison-square Garden to-night. Four fire services will be held in the garden to-morrow, the second being devoted to the baptism of converts. This will be Dowie's last appearance in the garden, the remainder of his visit here being devoted to mass meetings to be held in Carnegie Hall on Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday next.

Comstock, director of Washburn observatory to-night. "Probably the real cause is the severe disturbance on the face of the sun producing heavy electrical currents which affect the earth and create the brilliant aurora borealis. At least this is the belief of the scientists."

Prof. Comstock said that a series of eruptions or disturbances occur on the surface of the sun in cycles of eleven years, each beginning at or near the forty-fifth degree of latitude and gradually working toward the equator. These disturbances are much like thunderstorms on earth, beginning with a minimum of intensity and gradually increasing to the maximum when they cease at or near the equator.
